

A guide to...

Making or changing your will

Helping to to create a wilder future

You can make a lasting difference for Avon's wildlife

Making your will for the first time

You will need to collect some details before you visit your solicitor.

What you own – Included in this guide is an easy-to-follow checklist to help you collect this information together. The Inheritance Tax threshold is currently £325,000 and the current rate of tax is set at 40%. If you are liable for Inheritance Tax, it is possible to reduce your liability from 40% to 36% by leaving 10% or more of your net estate to charity.

Who you want to include in your will – who do you want to give something to? How do you want to divide your estate between family, friends and charities you care about?

Personal details – You will have to collect information about your family and status. Are you divorced or has your civil partnership been dissolved? Have you remarried or entered a new civil partnership? Or are you living with someone without being married or in a civil partnership? Do you have any children or other dependents? If you give your solicitor details about your personal situation, they will be able to advise you on any potential legal pitfalls.

Guardians – If you have any children who may still be under 18 when your will is enacted, you may need to name someone as their legal guardian.

Other wishes – Do you have any instructions for your funeral? Do you want to be buried or cremated? Do you have any other wishes?

Executors of your will – You need to name anyone you want to appoint as 'executors' of your will to administer your wishes. This can be family, friends or a solicitor.

Signing the will – Your will becomes effective once it has been correctly signed and witnessed. Your solicitor will ensure this is all done correctly.

Changing your will

There may be times where you need to change the details of your will to reflect changes in your life such as you gain some new assets, or you wish to include a new charity. Whatever the reason for changing your will, it is a simple process that we recommend you use a trusted, Law Society accredited solicitor to help you with.

To alter your current will, you can add a document called a codicil. A codicil acts as a supplement to your original will, changing the elements you wish, but keeping the rest of the will intact and legally binding.

Codicils are recommended for straightforward changes such as increasing a cash gift or changing an executor. If you would like to make a complicated change, it is usually advisable to make a new will so always consult a solicitor on what the best approach is for you.

There is no limit on how many codicils can be added to a will. The only requirement is that they must be signed by the person who made the will and be witnessed in the same way as your will was originally. However, the witnesses do not have to be the same people as for your original will.

Glossary

Here are some of the words you may hear when preparing or changing your will, and an explanation of what they mean.

Beneficiaries: Those who would benefit from a gift in your will.

Bequest: A gift in your will.

Codicil: An instruction added to a will to make a change.

Estate: The sum total of what you own, including your assets and liabilities.

Executors: The individual(s) you appoint to ensure your wishes are carried out.

Guardians: The individual(s) you appoint to look after your children, in the event of your death.

Inheritance Tax: The Inheritance Tax threshold is currently £325,000 and the current rate of tax is set at 40%. If you are liable for Inheritance Tax, it is possible to reduce your liability from 40% to 36% by leaving 10% or more of your net estate to charity.
